

Dear Trusted Adult,

Changes! Puberty can begin between the ages of 8-16 and with it can come many changes to a person's body, feelings and relationships. This kit is designed to help you support young people in learning about puberty.

Here are some tips:

Reflect on your feelings, values and biases about puberty and sexuality –

Be honest with yourself. Use the reflection questions in the activity card deck to help you.

Be gender inclusive - It's valuable for all of us to learn about human bodies and others' experiences - to better understand friends, siblings, or future partners.

Consider your relationship with the young person – Whether you have a personal or professional relationship can guide how much you share personal opinions and experiences. If you're a mandatory reporter, it's important to let people know. Consider: Who are other trusted adults that they could turn to learn more about values and culture? How can you support youth in developing their own values and opinions?

Be concrete – Use medically accurate language and keep it simple and frank. Use scenarios to make things more realistic.

Mix it up – Use books, items that can be touched, visuals, games, videos, websites. We all learn in different ways. Interaction is more engaging than lecture!

Respond honestly – Let young people know that their questions are welcome.

- 1) Affirm the question (Example: "I'm glad you asked that. Many people your age wonder about it.")
- 2) Clarify the question (Example: "When you say the word _____, what do you mean by that?")
- 3) Answer the question addressing facts, and helping to explore the feelings and values behind the question.

Don't worry about...

- Being embarrassed (or not). They may be embarrassed, too. Practice can make it easier!
- Not having all the answers. No one does! Just follow up by offering to find the answer or connecting them with someone who does.

What you will find in this kit

A blank notebook for the young person to keep. This could be a “private” diary.

Activity cards with self-reflection activities, cultural exploration activities, conversation starters, and teaching guides.

Photos of personal care items to start conversations about what they are for, how often they are used, and how to use them safely:
