JUDGE RANDAL FRITZLER has served on the bench of the Clark County District Court since 1987, including six years as Presiding Judge. He is a founder of the Clark County Domestic Violence Court and an organizer of the Clark County Mental Health Court, which began operation in 2000. He was the first Clark County judge to hold a "night court," and the first to serve as a County Superior Court Commissioner while on the bench. In 1997, he negotiated an agreement that ensured alcohol evaluations and State-funded treatment for qualifying inmates in the Clark County jail. Since 1999, he has chaired the Therapeutic Jurisprudence Committee of the American Judges Association.

An attorney since 1974, Judge Fritzler has served on numerous other boards and committees – on local, statewide and national levels. Recent work on therapeutic jurisprudence and court reform has led to testimony before Washington State and U.S. Congressional Judiciary Committees. He is the author of numerous papers and has presented at many conferences and seminars. He has served on the faculties of Clark and Washington State Judicial College. In 1998, the Washington State Misdemeanant Corrections Association named him Outstanding Judge of 1998, and in 2001 he received the Clark County C.A.R.E. Award, presented jointly by the Board of County Commissioners and the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Boards of Clark County.

DEBORAH CIMA is the Drug Treatment Court Administrator for the Superior Court of San Bernardino County, CA, a position she has held since 1997. She also coordinates communications and training and acts as a facilitator and mediator between probation, the Court, jail mental health services, treatment providers, and the Department of Behavioral Health. She supervises public relations activities and organizes inter-jurisdictional exchanges.

Holding an M.S. in Counseling and Psychology, Ms. Cima began working with the Office of Alcohol and Drug Programs in 1994. She serves as a facilitator for the National Drug Court Institute and teaches the ASI (Addiction Severity Index assessment tool) at a local community college.
