about the next focus. After group discussion, some themes for ongoing Y&GV work include (underlined items are action items):

- Youth involvement (in policy meetings, to policy-makers, and relationship-building, like noho's) and community voice (tap into existing groups), and communicate the work we've done with folks who were engaged in the first assessment
- Ongoing networking and information-sharing
- Institutionalize relationships, no matter what person represents a specific agency
- Monitoring the OJJDP gang plan implementation (pointed accountability for each strategy) -- particular energy noted on strategy 6
- Briefing on various types of violence and violence prevention work, from national policy to local climate
- More visuals to educate broader community, creating a narrative, especially with a focus on assets
- Continue ongoing learning about trauma and cultural responsiveness.
- Continue value framework of trauma informed care and that youth and child behavior is often a symptom of their situation/environment.

Lily Yamamoto debriefed the implementation planning meeting. There is a follow up meeting this Tuesday, April 11th.

Christina will send out the list of implementation coordinators.

Each strategy may create its own charter. Lily will provide a sample charter.

On May 4th, everyone should be ready to share their agency's violence prevention strategies.
